Madrasa Resource Centre, Kenya (MRC, K): a programme of the Aga Khan Foundation was established in 1986 after Muslim leaders from Kenya's coastal region recognised the need to improve their children's level of academic achievement.

Research suggested that positive experiences in early years including access to education and a healthy, positive learning environment profoundly influenced children's success in school and life.

MRC, K supports communities and builds their capacity to provide Early Childhood Development (ECD) services through locally owned pre-schools.

The schools in the Madrasa Programme practice action-oriented pedagogy where children learn through play, discovery and interaction.

MRC, K has partnered with more than 66 schools, training over 2000 teachers and celebrating over 25,000 alumni.
